NEWS OF ENERGY

A number of people concerned about America's energy situation—and the jobs, health and comfort of the millions of Americans who are affected by it—are heartened by the news that America's oil companies have been making important contributions to developing alternative energy sources.

For oil companies, energy diversification is a natural step. They have experience in developing large capital, deferred pay-out energy projects and they have technological know-how that can be used in developing other energy sources.

Studies show that oil company activities have substantially increased alternate energy production or the potential for future production, and inspired new research and development capabilities.

Between 1970 and 1975 oil companies raised the uranium output by 18 percent. Oil companies have increased coal production, too.

According to the National Science Foundation, in 1975 the oil industry spent $416 million for energy research and development, which is nearly a third of total U.S. government and private energy research and development expenditures. Oil company expenditures in 1976 on alternative energy sources such as oil shale, coal gasification and liquefaction, tar sands and geothermal energy alone exceeded $100 million.

A WIDE VARIETY of new energy sources are being efficiently explored by America's oil companies.

Oil company research and development is especially important because oil companies transfer expertise from petroleum and natural gas to alternative energy sources. They have also contributed large energy development investments because they can raise the substantial capital necessary and have the incentive to adapt to changing energy markets from their existing base of operations.

It would seem we can stop being as dependent as we are on oil, if our oil companies have their way.

In early England, land was measured by how much an ox could plow in a day. These measurements were known as oxgangs and averaged about 15 acres.

On May 16, 1866 a five cent coin first appeared in America. It was known as a "nickel."

recommended to each funding agency that it immediately adopt a 5-year hold harmless policy under which no area or municipality would suffer simply because of a definitional change in its metropolitan statistical area status. In principle, the agencies have accepted this recommendation.

With regard to the current status of the criteria proposals, the proposal issued in November with the technical modifications made in January, was approved on January 31 by the Statistical Policy Coordination Committee, a Cabinet-level committee established by President Carter in 1977 and chaired by Secretary Kreps. The Federal Committee on Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas is now redrafting the criteria document to incorporate the latest modifications.

Then And Now

By Frances H. Paulette

Someone Special---

Then, Now, And Always

Tomorrow, maybe, I'll straighten out all of my desk drawers and it will be such a pleasant surprise to be able to find things without looking twice!

One evening next week, maybe, I'm going to remove all the books from the bookshelves and put all the reading material back in an organized and orderly fashion.

Without a doubt, next month, I'm going to turn over a new leaf and make a point of doing a bit more visiting to the shut-ins.....

Tomorrow, next week, next year.....always later, never today. Isn't that the way it goes for most of us? We're just too busy, too healthy, and too happy with our own little world to worry about what we're leaving undone. There will always be a tomorrow.....are we sure?

When you come right down to it, it doesn't matter whether the desk drawers get straightened or not. The books can easily remain on the disorganized fashion to which they have become accustomed. It's other things that count.

Today you met someone on the street.....you made a decided impression; what kind was it? Were you in too much of a hurry to smile or indulge in a bit of friendly conversation?

Years ago someone taught you in Sunday School or Bible School and you still remember those classes and that person. In fact you often speak of just how much that person meant to you. Do you suppose that individual had any idea as to what extent they would influence your life? Did they realize just how long you would remember? Suppose they had said, "I'll teach Bible School or Sunday School next year.....but not this time; I'm just too busy."

We always want to wait until we have a bit more time to do with care those things we're 'putting off.' Oh yes, tomorrow will definitely be a better time.

I had a friend who had the habit of 'putting off.....things like sewing on a button or fixing that hemline back in place. In fact, one Sunday morning a lady commented to the mother of this friend that her three daughters were always so well groomed. With a twinkle in her eye and laughter in her voice she replied, "I'll tell you one thing, if every pin would fall out of the clothes of those girls as they walked up that church aisle they would be as naked as a jay bird!"

That may have been an exaggeration but this friend didnt like to bother with such little unimportant things. BUT, when it came to the things that really mattered, she was a "Do It Today" gal all the way!!

She possessed a ready smile, this friend of mine, and she used it constantly. She took time to speak to people, to ask about their problems, to offer a bit of encouragement if needed. She did these things, not because it was good for business, but because she cared.....she really cared.

I feel priviledged, indeed, to have had the opportunity of working with this friend as we taught children and young people in Sunday School and Bible School. She loved young people and they knew it. She made a point of trying to put herself in their shoes and think and feel as they did. It was a habit with her to find out something that a young person did really well and encourage them in that endeavor rather than dwell on past mistakes or unpleasant incidents.

This friend was a 'sharing' friend.....her money, her time, and most of all her love. The greatest thing she shared was her faith in Jesus Christ and what He meant to her life. She didn't put off until tomorrow the opportunity to share; she didn't wait.....she was a witness whenever the opportunity arose.

Along with a host of other people, I lost this friend recently to the dreaded disease, cancer. Her fight was courageous, her faith beautiful, as it deepened with each passing day. She made the use of every opportunity.....a smile, a word, a 'caring' attitude. No, she didn't wait until tomorrow.

This friend was a lovely, lovely lady and her name was Rosa Mae. Rosa Mae Woolridge Abbitt, a very dear friend.

Eating Well

by Mrs. Barbara L. Morlang, R.D., Ph.D., State Nutrition Consultant
Va. Dept. of Health

Why Does A Person Become Obese?

The usual answer is that obesity is caused by an intake of calories beyond the need of the body for energy. However, this statement tends to oversimplify the problem. The reasons for obesity are many and complex, and include genetic as well as environmental factors. Eating too much may be a result of family custom of using high-calorie foods, or maintaining irregular habits of eating (which may include snacking all day on sweets).

As we get older we need fewer calories. Many people tend to gain weight throughout life because they fail to adjust their appetites to the reduced energy requirement. Eating may also provide us with psychological support. Often we eat when we are bored, feel lonely, or need an excuse to avoid the realities of life.

At present researchers believe that there may be a connection between over-feeding in infancy, and obesity in adult life. Studies show that dietary patterns developed in infancy are carried throughout life – childhood overfeeding may lead to adult overeating. Another theory is that excess food in infancy may cause the child to produce a larger number of fat cells.

Film Honoring Corrie Ten Boom To Be Shown

A new color motion picture honoring the life of Corrie ten Boom will be presented at Red Oak Baptist Church on Highway 26 in Oakville. Entitled CORRIE: The Lives She's Touched, the film, produced by World Wide Pictures, will be shown Sunday, April 8, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Filmed in Denver before a live audience of more than 2,000 persons gathered to pay tribute to Corrie's ministry of love and compassion, CORRIE: The Lives She's Touched shares in greater detail the events that have taken place in her life.

During World II Corrie and her family, residents of Haarlem, Holland, became involved in the Dutch Underground following the invasion of their homeland by Hitler's Nazi forces. They are credited with saving the lives of scores of Jews, by hiding them in a secret room in their home, and by arranging safe passage out of the country. For their effort, they were arrested in a surprise raid, and sent to prison. Corrie was sent to Ravensbruck Concentration Camp, and is the lone survivor of the immediate family.

Corrie's story has been shared with millions around the world through the book and motion picture, THE HIDING PLACE. A 1975 World Wide Picture release, THE HIDING PLACE has been dubbed into several foreign languages, and has been well received in England, Holland, and West Germany, as well as throughout the Far East.

CORRIE: The Lives She's Touched, is hosted by Cliff Barrows of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Team, and features a number of surprise guests from Corrie's past, including her nephew, Peter van Woerden, who, as a youth, was also involved in the work of the Underground, and Diet Ehrlick, who was in the concentration camp with Corrie.

Other guests on the program included Jeannette Clift, the actress who portrayed Corrie in THE HIDING PLACE, and Tom Claus, an American Indian Chief who inducted Corrie into his tribe as an honorary member.

Music is featured throughout the one-hour program by Evie Tornquist, George Beverly Shea, the Bill Gaither Trio, and by Tedd Smith, pianist and composer of the film score for THE HIDING PLACE.

According to the Reverend G. E. Hughes, pastor of Red Oak Church, the showing is free and open to the public.
